

Grasmere [19th May] - The Easdale Skyline ridge traverses some attractive but seldom-visited places in Lakeland with many fine views.

Seathwaite [9th June] - Scafell Pike, England's highest mountain at 977m, is a magnet for fell-walkers of all abilities. This route leaves the busy tourist path and dives feet first into Grains Gill. After splashing about in the sparkling pools of the ghyll, a long enjoyable scramble leads into the heart of the fells, then over Allen Crag up to the summit of Scafell Pike. The return is made via the impressive Corridor Route.

Cheviots [24th March] - Most walkers approach the boggy plateau of The Cheviot (2,676ft/815m) from the south on the well-worn route via the Pennine Way, or from the east via Langleeford and the Harthope Burn. By doing so, they miss two of the great scenic wonders of the massif: the remote, hidden valley of the College Burn and the mysterious craggy ravine of Hen Hole.

Ullswater [21st April] - This is an interesting but rather strenuous circuit from Glenridding. The northern arm of it in particular is little-visited.
